In 1960, FRANKS and Witt proposed a sampled-data (discrete-time) 108kHz notch filter based on discrete solid-state switches and impedance elements. Junction-diode switches were used to replace a mechanical sampling switch.